

Aims and Scope

The Revista de Lingüística y Lenguas Aplicadas aims to contribute to the dissemination of scholarly research in the field of language study, especially that of specialised languages. Whether from a theoretical or a practical perspective, contributions discussing any of the following areas are of particular interest:

- Discourse Analysis
- Language Teaching
- Terminology and Translation
- Languages for Specific Purposes (LSP)
- Computer-Assisted Language Learning (CALL)

Editorial Policy

Published by the Department of Applied Linguistics at the Universidad Politécnica de Valencia, the Revista de Lingüística y Lenguas Aplicadas is a peer-reviewed, yearly journal of linguistic studies, designed to target an international readership and to contribute to the promotion of knowledge regarding applied linguistics. Thus, this journal will serve as a common ground for the multiple approaches to the traditional study of language sciences, facilitating the exchange of research methodologies, results and experiences.

The primary goal of the Editorial Board is to provide readers with high quality, empirical research that places great emphasis on professional communication, interactive dialogue and mutual understanding among researchers working in the distinct areas of specialization within the field of applied linguistics. This high standard of quality is guaranteed not only by the participation of distinguished reviewers from across the globe, but also by the thorough process of evaluation to which submissions are subjected. To this end, authors, editors, and reviewers are requested to document the results of their work in a clear and concise manner as well as to present their work in strict accordance with the guidelines for contributors and the instructions for manuscript preparation.