Scene 1

- Did YOU hear that?
- What?
- Train
- No, I didn't hear no TRAIN
- Nothing, I guess
- Well, where is uh Whistle Stop ON the map?
- I can't find IT
- Well, why did you tell me TO turn right ten miles back there?
God, you got A negative sense of direction, honestly
- I'm sorry. Oh, Ed, your aunt's going to BE so disappointed we're late. I know she's been looking forward TO this visit all week long.
- Hey, how's my SWEET Auntie V. this afternoon?
- Remember us?
- Don't you look pretty
- We brought you something to ...
- Let me look AT ya!
- Honey, don't act like this.
- Don't ... you know that Evelyn loves you?
- Uh, honey, I guess it would BE better if you just wait out here FOR me or something. I'll get all this up
- Well, if you think it's best
- Yeah, I do this time. Okay?
- Have A nice day, Aunt Vesta.
- Don't you pitch a fit like that

Scene 2

- Did you know they took my gall bladder out?
- Uh, no, I didn't
- Oh, yes. Still in the hospital, in a jar
- I guess that's where they keep them
- I guess
- When I was in the hospital, the nurse give me one of them Fleet enemas. They're so fond OF
Mrs. Cleo Threadgoode, eighty-two year-old widow, imagine that. Naturally, everybody CALLS me Ninny
Course, I'm just visiting here
Did you ever have one of them Fleet enemas?
- Um, ... well ... no
- You'd remember it. Me and my friend Mrs. Otis come from Whistle Stop. You ever been TO Whistle Stop?
- Why, yes. I just passed BY there today
- She's lived down the street from me FOR, oh thirty years or more. After her son died, her daughter-in-law had a fit for her to come live here at the nursing home and they ask me TO come with her and be her roommate. Mrs. Otis don't know it, but I'm going back home just soon as she gets settled in good.
Does the name Idgie Threadgoode ring A bell?
- No ma'am. I don't think SO
